

South Side

By Lynne Alessio

"To everything there is a season, and a time for every purpose under heaven."

This phrase expresses so well the fact that school life is divided into marked sections, each a season in itself. Besides there being the fall, winter, spring, and (in some eyes) the "glorious" summer, there is the setting of quarters and semesters and seasons of sports—football, basketball, wrestling, tennis, track, and baseball.

As each of these sports events conclude its season, a certain amount of school spirit dies with it. It is because football comes first in the chronological list of events, that it comes first, too, in the minds of the students?

It seems that the spirit the Spartans showed for a winning football season is becoming more and more exhausted as the basketball season continues. Was the spirit used up, or is it being stored up for year's football season?

Even more poorly attended than basketball games are the other meets. Though cross country and wrestling matches are begun first semester, sports events such as tennis, track, and baseball are held through the springtime season. These are the worst attended of all. Could the reason be that as the year wanes, so does the spirit? If this is true, maybe it would be wise to change the chronological order of these events. In Southern California, weather is not as vital a factor in scheduling sports as in other sections of the country.

Of course, this would mean that schools besides South High would have to change the scheduling, but it's about time some other sport than football be recognized. Now that South has a new soccer team, some interest in this sport has arisen. But in the course of the years, this interest may wane or die. Instead of being better recognized, it, too, may be stifled by football.

A change such as the re-scheduling of sports events could not go unnoticed. South has needed something done to alleviate this problem for some time. The solution to the spirit problem is there; someone only needs the courage to look behind the trophy case for it.
